Rat Proof Corn Orib.

There are several methods of making ratproof corn cribs, but we notice a new contrivance submitted by a corres-pondent of the Prairie Farmer, which, though somewhat more expensive, will doubtless resist the inroads of both dy vigor of former generations that ed by the Hon. Henry Watterson, will mice and rats. The plan of construction of every man, recognize for the first time the fact that tion it will be best to give in the correspondent's own words: "It is always cures—those ancient fathers. They better to set a crib about two feet off lived simply, and successfully met and the ground, on posts or stones, as may overcome difficulties that would have be desired, so that the air can pass freely under it. Lay the floor of hemlock or poplar or yellow pine, the planks four or five, or even six inches wide, and let them be laid at least one inchapart, so that the air can pass up through the corn. Cover the floor those things and laid the foundations with woven wire, with meshes that the mice can't pass through. Popular will low. Their constitutions were strong. mice can't pass through. Poplar will joy. Their constitutions were strong; be good enough for the slats (pine rots their health unsurpassed and yet they too quickly.) Put them on, say, one were forced to expose themselves coninch apart; then nail on the inside of tinually. There certainly must have the studding woven wire, sufficiently strong to resist the pressure of the corn, and with meshes of a size that a mouse can't pass through. Then nail a woven wire to the cross pieces overhead. This wire cloth need not be made of heavy wire; neither should that which is laid on the floor. This kind of a crib will be rat and mouse the mouse of any let in mouse air then any of the present with the history of that time that certain home compounds of strengthening qualities were used almost universally by those pioneers. The malarial evils and exposures to which they were applied to present the strength of the present with the present with the present with the present were used almost universally by those pioneers.

We think that farmers generally ed by cold or debilitated by the damp will unite in approving of the utility of this crib; and also in the fact that if the first cost will be more than the antidotes. Medicines were few in those ordinary cribs, some of which are not a days, and doctors almost unknown.

The cost of keeping sheep is not great, says a correspondent of the American Cultivator, as a half dozen sheep will live where one cow could enough, and as they eat coarser food than the cow they would subsist in many pastures where cows would starve. If it is desired to fatten old sheep, or force early lambs for market, sheep, or force early lambs for market, few roots and a little gram will do it easily. It is estimated that a sheep will thrive well upon 31 per cent. of its weight of good hay daily during the winter. Thus a sheep of 100 pounds weight will need in five months about 500 pounds of hay. If grain or roots be given, poorer hay or straw may be used, keeping the expense about the same. Such a sheep should shear from five to six pounds of wool and raise at least one good lamb. Larger averages of wool are not uncom-

Poultry Raising.

The suggestion cannot be to frequently offered to farmers as to the exediency and profitableness of raising more poultry-at least, twice as much as they are now doing. The business, if properly conducted, would become one of the most lucrative branches upon the farm, especially when within easy reaching business of the Philadelphis or other good markets. It ought to be known to all American farmers the extent to which the business is prosecuted in France, where, from a careful estimate, it is found that the annual sales of poultry and eggs last year amounted to between eighty and nine-ty millions of dollars, which would, if equally divided amount the extent good markets. When it is considered that this is a branch of farming industry that can be managed entirely by women and children, and requires very little capital, the wonder is that it is not prosecuted to twice the extent it is. The chicken houses should be inexpensive, but roomy, well ventilated and cleanly. Every part of the food can be supplied by the offals of the farm, garden and house, and the time required end not be taken from the necessary working of the farm, and would really not be felt as a part of the farm labor. Besides, there would be an absolute pleasure in raising fowls of every kind, even pigeons, the squabs of which sell at the very high price of from forty to fifty cents per brace. Ass to the disposal of poultry in the markets, who has ever known of a surplus or of its being sacrificed for want of customers? The recipe for compounding this valuable article was handed down from one family and generation to another, was family and generation to another, was known to the Harrison family and is to see as the basis and general formula for the present "Tippecanoe," the name being suggested by the battle in which General Harrison was engaged. The manufacturers have thoroughly investigated this subject in its minutest details, and are certain that for malassimilation of food, dyspepsia, tired feels in the market two or three or five cents, it is no crime, as the law stands, to steal that which gives value to every one of fifty or a hundred thousand copies of that newspaper.

THE EYES OF POTATOES .- A COTTES pondent of the Country Gentleman writes: "A potato has three crops in itself-an early, a middle, and a late one. The cluster of eyes at one end will ripen one to two weeks earlier than the central eyes. The two or three small eyes immediately surrounding the root end should in all cases be discarded in growing for home use or for market. They produce mostly small potatoes and if large they are watery and soft. My usual method is to set one man to cut off the root end, and another to cut off the "eye end," thus forming three heaps. The root present the state of the state o thus forming three heaps. The root end heap goes to the hogs. My great trouble is to get them out close. All the waste flesh goes into heaps for cat-tle or hog feed.

News is Property.

A bill will soon be submitted to Con gress in which every self sustaining and self-respecting newspaper in the land is deeply interested. The measure, which we believe has been preparnews is property, and that the owners of property in news are entitled to the protection of the law. News is sought, bought, sold and stolen. It is sought in every part of the world, frequently at enormous cost and through complex organizations re-quiring the investment of large amounts capital. Brains and money are freely expended in procuring news. It is bought for cash. It is sold for cash. The ownership passes from the seller to the purchaser precisely as in the case of other things having market case of other things having market value. It is not only property, just as the white paper, the ink, the type, and the presses of the newspaper establish ment are property, but it is also, in one sense, the most valuable property of all. The newspaper exists only to publish it. The white paper carries it from the presses to the readers only because it is in itself a thing of value.

ed work of fiction, or of a copyrighted photograph, or map or chromo or piece of music is amply protected against piracy, the owner of news is at the mercy of thieves the moment that the first published copy of his journal reaches the market. Hundreds of piratical sheets have existed and still complete protection against these destructive pests, it will be the cheapest in the end.
